

It's an incredibly difficult uphill struggle these days to fight for a GREEN Planet in the face of the seemingly endless disasters embodied in the horrific environmental policies of the current U.S. Administration. Today, however, my faith and hope were rekindled when I learned about 350.org. I know, where have I been all my life? They came to my attention via an email from my friend Carl Mountain who had discovered an arresting blurb of juxtaposed quotes from an Instagram contributor, @think_and_exist:

It turns out that Naomi Klein is the co-founder of 350.org. When I visited their website, I was sufficiently impressed that I subscribed to their communications and even made a one-time donation when I don't even have any money to spare. I should mention that @think_and_exist seems to have an impressive and inspiring trove of juxtaposed quotes from luminaries drawn from history and current affairs out on Instagram: <https://www.instagram.com/p/DZqws2Zjeur/> I encourage you to visit both websites. Inspiration is part of my focus and my nourishment when I sign my emails as follows:

Brian Berardo

website: worthyvisions.com

Supporting Green Imperatives with KISMET: Kindness, Inspiration, Service,
Meditation, Exercise, Thankfulness.

I think this incredibly difficult uphill struggle these days to fight for a GREEN Planet desperately needs some inspiration and hope for the days ahead. May all that's good and imbued with love find its way to you and yours.